BARUCH PLAYED LONE HAND BUT MADE FORTUNE

Barney Baruch Discredits Lawson To Investigators Of Alleged "Leak."

SAYS HE CLEANED UP ONLY $476,168

Says Conditions And Not Inside Tips Indicated Falling Markets.

NEW YORK, JAN. 30.—Evidence that New York brokers had information earlier than 12:48 p. m., on Dec. 20 that the state department was going to issue a statement on peace, was adduced today at "leak" investigation. The president's peace note was not published until the following day.

The evidence was placed before the congressional committee by E. F. Hutton, a New York broker in the form of a confidential telegram he had received over the private wires of his firm from his correspondent in Chicago, Clement Curtis, and also from his correspondent at Washington, F. A. Connelley & Co., a partner, in which he testified in R. W. Bolling, brother-in-law of the president.

"I will say that the advice had nothing to do with either Mr. Connelley or Mr. Bolling," said Hutton.

NEW YORK, JAN. 30.—Barney Baruch played a "lone hand" in Wall Street during the now famous period between Dec. 11 to 23, and by so doing he cleaned up $476,168.47. The figures are his own. They were given to the house "leak" committee today by Baruch himself in a detailed statement of his speculations during that time. Baruch denied specifically and emphatically that he had any advance news of President Wilson's peace note. He has only seen presidential Secretary Tumulty once in months, he said, and never breakfasted with him at the Biltmore.

"Moonshine," he called such reports.

Baruch's operations showed that he started selling the market short on Dec. 13.

Saw Peace Coming.

"I saw peace coming with Von Bethmann-Hollweg's speech," said Baruch, "and I started getting from under. Lloyd George followed this up by leaving the door to peace open in his speech."

"But the one thing that shaped my course in this period more than anything else was this: The Japanese people—than whom there are no cleverer in the world—too steps to close their stock exchange. They saw what was coming and they were in a position to know. So I went."

Only once during this period, Baruch said, had he talked with Secretary Tumulty.

President Fights For A Strike Law

The committee reports the railroad bill to the senate, an amendment will be offered by administration senators to make strikes and lockouts unlawful pending a three months investigation by a presidential commission.

Americans To Be Warned Off Ships

Germany Will Warn Americans Not To Sail On Armed Ships Of Allies As She Intends To Sink Them On Sight—Submarine Outlook Critical—Fight To Finish Is Certain.

WASHINGTON, JAN. 30.—A warning to Americans not to take passage on ships armed by the enemies of the central powers is expected here soon. Whether the warning will be conveyed to the state department thru the American embassy in Berlin or thru the German embassy in Washington is not indicated.

For several weeks the German government has been submitting representations to the state department in cases wherein it is claimed merchant ships, armed ostensibly for defensive purposes, have attacked German submarines.

Reports that Great Britain and her allies were considering placing still heavier armament upon their merchant ships, have been regarded in German quarters as forecasting fights to a finish between armed merchantmen of the entente allies and submarines of the central powers, with the resumption of naval operations in the spring.

It is asserted in the same quarters that upon no consideration will British or French merchant ships submit to visit and search, in accordance with the customs of international law and that this adds to the certainty of battle between the two classes of enemy craft.

Losses Immunity by Firing. The presence of even one gun on a merchantman has always been held by German officials to be pregnant of danger to passengers and crew. If a merchantman so armed open fire, according to the principles of international law recognized by the United States, it loses immunity. If an answering shot is fired by a submarine it is said to be operating in conformity with law. According to the American view the instant the merchant ship capitulates it and the passengers and crew are again to be considered immune from harm.

German officials now have about reached the conclusion that it is proper to call the attention of the United States to the cases submitted and suggest in friendly spirit that Americans taking passage on ships which the United States considers defensively armed needlessly place themselves in danger.

CROWN PRINCE IS WELL LKED IN GERMANY

Shows French At Verdun That He Is Still Capable Of Fight and Strategy.

ALLIES COUNTED HIM OUT OF GAME

Recent Desperate Fighting In France Centers Attention Upon Him.

NEW YORK, JAN. 30. (Copyright, 1917 by I. N. S.)—With the terrible Somme battle "stilled in mud and blood," as the Germans characterize it, the "lug of war" around Verdun is temporarily again moving to the foreground in the western theatre of war.

Crown Prince Frederick William has given the French "tit" for their recent "tit" when they drove his rather thin lines east of Verdun back for some distance. The Crown Prince now has answered with a smash against the French north and northwest of Verdun.

The drive occurred on a line of between three and five miles between the Ayoncourt woods and Deadman's Hill. The latter is rightly named. It is one vast cemetery.

The move by the Crown Prince appears to be rather unexpected and somewhat of a surprise. The allies had "counted out" the Germans around Verdun.

Still Has Punch Left. But the Crown Prince still has a "punch" left. His drive brot him again the blood soaked weight "304" which the French wrested away from him some time ago.

Strategically the Crown Prince's smash against the French lines west of the Meuse river may be regarded as of greater value than the French drive against the German lines east of Verdun. Without necessarily attaching too great importance to these

FINGER PRINTS AID COURT HOUSE NEWS

They Help Greatly in the Solution of Crime.

EXCHANGE SYSTEM FOUNDED.

New York City Has More Than 190,000 Impressions—Bureau in Charge of Inspector Faurot—Every Human Being Has a Distinct and Individual Mark.

New York. The work of the bureau of criminal identification at police headquarters has been greatly enlarged and brought up to date. This is especially true of the finger print department, which today is recognized by the police as the best and surest method of making criminal identifications. Although the Bertillon system is still in use by the department, it has to a great extent been superseded by the finger print system.

The department has a collection of more than 190,000 finger impressions of individuals. These prints came from all over the United States, Canada and from many European cities. Commissioner Woods some time ago sent notices to the police headquarters of every city in the country suggesting that copies of their finger prints be forwarded here. In the notices it was stated that the department possesses a very large collection of records of criminals who could be located only by means of finger prints; that these came from all over the world and that if its records would offer its finger print service to them without expense. In many cases these notices were sent to the sheriffs of what is popularly known as "one horse towns." In this manner the department's finger print bureau has become a sort of clearing house for other police departments in the country. The bureau is in charge of Inspector Joseph A. Faurot.

The impressions are classified according to "whirls," "loops," "arches" or "deltas." The prints are carefully filed and indexed according to their characteristics. In a large room in the basement of headquarters the actual finger prints are taken. Printer's ink is spread by a roller on the surface of a glass table. The ink is smeared on the fingers of the prisoner, and the finger impressions are then taken down on paper. All of the fingers of both hands of the prisoner are taken.

The police after exhaustive studies have been able to learn much about finger prints. The system is based on the fact that every human being has a distinct and individual impression which differs from that of any other person. It has been abundantly demonstrated that no two finger prints are alike.

Two-Thirds Of Ohio's Rural Churches Have No Resident Minister

Survey Shows That 4,000 Have Memberships of Less Than 100—Emotionalism Is Criticized—One Co. Has Had 1500 Revivals In 30 Years But Conditions Are Deporable.

COLUMBUS, JAN. 30.—Six thousand churches in the 1200 Ohio rural townships.

One of these churches to every 236 persons.

Four thousand of these churches with memberships of less than 100.

Two-thirds of them without resident ministers.

This is the condition of the rural church in Ohio, as disclosed by Rev. C. O. Gill, secretary of the Ohio Rural Life association, in a survey, made public at the country life conference Tuesday, held in connection with Farmers' week at the university.

"The problem of the conservation of rural life will not be solved until the program of the churches includes the salvation of the community as well as the individuals until rural districts have resident ministers, until interdenominational co-operation has been brought about," Rev. Mr. Gill declared.

5000 Without Own Clergy.

He pointed out that 5000 Ohio country churches are without the undivided services of a minister; that 2200 churches have but one-fourth the services of a minister; that 3500 have but one-third the services, and that 700 have no minister's service.

Rev. Mr. Gill declared that one county in Ohio had had 1500 revivals in the last 30 years and yet disease, ignorance, illegitimacy, vote-selling and poverty are prevalent.

"The religion here is a travesty on the teachings of Jesus Christ," he added. "It is merely emotion and excitement."

A program, to meet the defects shown by the survey, was discussed by the conference. Suggestions offered were: holding of institutes for an exchange of suggestions on the survey; better paid rural ministers, and county ministerial associations.

Dr. Vogt Is Speaker.

The State Sunday School association and theological seminaries will be asked to co-operate, the former in organizing county ministerial associations.

tary McAdoo. That was when he called him over the telephone to suggest the name of a man to be appointed by the federal reserve board.

"At whose suggestion did you do this?" asked Rep. Campbell.

"Col. E. M. House's," replied Baruch, smiling.

White's Denial

A sweeping denial that he had received any advance information concerning the peace moves of the German emperor and President Wilson before they were chronicled in the newspapers was made by Archibald
S. White, "Count Von Bernstorff's friend," when he resumed the witness stand at the congressional "leak" inquiry.

"I had no information concerning either document before their publication," said White emphatically.

Sherman L. Whipple, counsel to the committee read to White bits of previous testimony, showing that knowledge of the two peace moves obtained in diplomatic circles before their publication. But while admitting that he and the German ambassador were close friends, White declared that he had no intimation of the two secrets.

Representative Campbell of Kansas made an unsuccessful attempt to get White's opinion concerning Thomas W. Lawson.

"I think he is a remarkable character," said White.

Queer About Lawson

"But do you think he should be in an insane asylum or in jail as has been suggested here?" pursued Campbell.

"That is not for me to say, sir," replied White gravely.

White denied emphatically that he and Lawson, in their weekly meetings, ever discussed what effect a peace move would have on the market.

"Did not Mr. Lawson suggest to you?" queried Campbell, "that the market was too heavy, that a suggestion of peace would start the market downward and that it would be a good time for a bunch of friends to get together and make a 'cleaning'?"

"He did not."

In response to a question by Rep.
Chipmfield of Illinois White declared he never attached much importance to the bulk of Lawson's statements.

CROWN PRINCE

hard jolts" that either side delivered to the other, it has again focussed public attention on the German Crown Prince.

Like many other things, German the public here has a very distorted picture of the German Crown Prince.
I am asked the most absurd questions about him and many other persons and conditions in Germany.

Blind passion and prejudice has wholly warped mental vision of those who see in Germans nothing but "huns" and "barbarians."

"Stupid War"

The same is true of the radical pro-Germans in their viewpoint of Great Britain and everything British.
Facts have little bearing on the reasoning of either these two radical partisan parties.

Crown Prince Frederick William
or merely "Wilhelm," as he is called across the little picture he gave me in the field of himself, has changed considerably during the war.

The "stupid and wholly unnecesary war" as he characterized the great conflict to me, has not passed over his head unheeded. It has left its mark on him.

Crown Prince William, who will in all probability become emperor William III, has been thru a hard and bitter school of experience. Always buoyant, lively and boyish for his years, the Crown Prince has become much more sedate, quiet and reflective. In appearance alone he is the same boyish figure. He looks 26 or 27, rather than the 32 that he is.

Is Not Unpopular

The loss of many close intimate friends has been a shock to him and the rugged, aged tents in the ranks of his own troops, among whom he is the most popular, have more than once brought the mist to the eyes of the future emperor of Germany.

Except when in the intimate circle of his staff and suite, the Crown Prince nevertheless has never been the firebrand or war habit that he has so much been painted abroad.

Politically the Crown Prince never has had much influence, perhaps less today than ever. And yet I have never seen like him a German, German or political leader who had more and more liberal views on matters political than Crown Prince Wilhelm.

Don't Blame Him

No blame for the failure at Verdun is attached to Crown Prince William. That responsibility is placed quite upon other shoulders. The Crown Prince was merely carrying out, as commander of the Verdun attack, orders that came to him and to try to execute plans, the making of which are chiefly in the hands of the general staff and its chief.

The German people, knowing that there is no way disposed to lay the failure of the plan at the door of the Crown Prince.

The Crown Prince has worked hard in the "school of war." It has been a "school of experience," sometimes bitter and hard. He has learned more in those two and a half years than probably he would have in ten years of the peaceful theoretical school of war.

Poisoned Cakes Thot To Be Cause Of Five Deaths In A Family

KANKAKEE, ILL. JAN. 30.—A meal of pancakes hastily made and as hurriedly eaten yesterday morning caused the death of five members of the Meints family of a farm between Arlington and Danforth, 15 miles south of here.

The pancakes were made by Mrs.
O. K. Meints, mother of four of the victims and grandmother of the fifth.
Mrs. Meints is believed to have mixed the contents of a sack containing an arsenic preparation used by her husband in taxidermy with a prepared pancake flour, thinking the powder flavor, etc. none.

"When the farm loan banks are in

he declared.

"The farm mortgages does not bear fruit in five or 10 years," he continued.
"The farmer needs long time loans at low rates of interest, just the same as public service corporations, in order to make his investment pay."

Mr. Quick went into a detailed account of the operation of the law, showing how it would benefit the farmer.

Societies Meeting

Tuesday marked the opening of many of the a-sociation meetings scheduled for the week. Chief among the was the fifth anniversary celebration of the Ohio State Horticultural society, the Country Life conference, State Farmers' institute and Ohio Seed Improvement association.

Mr. Rose Meisner, New York, concert singer and lecturer, visited meetings Tuesday, preaching the gospel of the American home songs.

At every lecture or meeting she started "Old Black Joe," "Old Kentucky Home" and other old-time melodies. Just before Herbert Quick began his address in the chapel, she ran to the piano and started "Way Down Upon the Swannee River." The crowd joined in.

When the Sleeper Walked

By M. QUAD
Copyright, 1916, by the McClure
Newspaper Syndicate.

Mr. Samuel White kept a general store in the village of Hazleton. It was a small village, and the trade was mostly with the farmers around it.

Mr. White was an energetic, pushing sort of man, and there came a time when he overdid it. His nerves gave way, and there was fear among his friends that he was going to break down.

Mr. White's only clerk was an old bachelor named Penfold. He had been in the store since its opening and could be trusted to the utmost limit. He had a room at the back of the store, and it was his custom after the doors were locked to sit and read for a couple of hours.

Mr. White's nervous strain had not bettered itself when, one night as the clerk sat reading, he heard a key rattling in the front door, and a moment later a man walked in. Penfold's door was open, and his light was so placed that he could see the length of the store very plainly. The man stood for a moment looking around him. His figure was that of Mr. White, but he had a mask over his face and false whiskers. He stood for a minute as if finding himself in a strange place and then walked toward Penfold's room, turned to the right and passed around the counter.

The man was behind the counter for perhaps two minutes, and then he reappeared and, without a look toward Penfold, walked to the front door and out of it, turning the key after him.
The clerk had heard him moving the jar in which the money was kept and at once investigated. The money it contained amounted to about $600, for there had been some heavy sales during the last three days. It was gone!
Not a bill remained!

As soon as daylight broke Mr. White was notified, and he at once flew into a violent temper. He charged his old and trusted clerk with having taken the money and would not hear the story of a strange man.

Mr. White was alone in the store that day, and he made no explanations to any one except to his brother-in-law, named Carson. Mr. Carson at once volunteered to take Penfold's place at night until he had solved the mystery. He did not believe Penfold curity. But there was a mystery to be solved. When night came he was on hand, and he had a shotgun for a weapon. He did not pass his time in reading, but in listening, and about midnight he heard some one approach the front door. Then the key was turned in the lock and the door opened.

There stood the stranger. He had the figure of Mr. White, but he also had the mask and whiskers that Pen-fold had told about. He acted just as the man had done on the previous night. He walked to the counter and around it and robbed the jar of about $75. He came within ten feet of Carson, but did not seem to notice him.

"Well," said the latter to himself when the stranger had passed out and departed, "I think I have solved this mystery, but I want another night to make sure of it."

Mr. White was told of the second robbery, and he related a little to Carson. The affair was as great a mystery to him as to the two others.
It was proposed to him that Penfold should pass the next night with Carson, and he readily consented.

On this day the sales amounted to $120. It was placed in the jar. Pen-fold was on hand when the store was locked up that night, and he, too, had brought a gun. If the stranger came again he was to be captured at all costs. The time wore away until about midnight, and, by the strongest appeared just as he had twice before!
His actions were the same. He was allowed to pass behind the counter and get possession of the money before he was interfered with. He was leaving the store when the men grabbed him.
To their surprise, he made no resistance whatever. One of them seized his whiskers and the other his mask and pulled them off, and Mr. White stood there before them! He was very much dazed, and it was half a minute
before he could say:

"Why, men, what is this? What are we all doing here? This is the store isn't it?"

"You have been robbing yourself Sam White," replied the brother-in-law. "You were at the money jar five minutes ago, and I bet the roll is in your pocket."

He inserted his hand into a pocket and pulled out the money. At the same moment his wife arrived and gave her explanation.

"You see," she said, "that I have suspected for a week past that Sam walked in his sleep, and I remained awake tonight to convince myself. I know that he was sound asleep when he got out of bed and dressed himself. I followed him downstairs and saw him head this way. Then it came to me that he was the robber, and I hurried after him."

"But what have I done with the money I took from the jar?"

The two men accompanied her home.

and a search was made, and in a ho-tean drawer where he kept his shirts and cuffs was found every cent of it.

Mr. Penfold went back to his studium. The brother-in-law had a hearty fit of laughter, and Mr. White went west for a vacation that lasted a month, and up to date the old jar has done
duty as a fire and burglar proof safe.

Helpfulness

You cannot help any one very much unless you can inspire him with the ambition to help himself, and that is why a good example is worth more than any other kind of assistance.
Make right-doing so attractive in your own life that it will inspire the lookers to do right.

Rare Branches

The thing next in beauty to a tree in full leaf is a tree bare; its every exquisite shape revealed, and its hold on the sky seeming so unspeakably assured; and, more than the beautiful of shape and the outlining on the sky, is the grace of prophecy and promise which every slender twig bears and reveals in its tiny gray buds.—Helen Hunt Jackson.

Daily Thought

A cheerful temper, joined with innocence, will make beauty attractive, knowledge delightful and wit good-natured. It will lighten sickness, poverty and affliction; convert ignorance into an amiable simplicity, and tender deformity itself agreeable.—Addison.

Responsibility

What an empty thing life would be without responsibility. The shut-in who is in life without the responsibilities of life provides responsibilities for others. His burden becomes lighter when he is made to feel that to another it is an incentive.

HOSPITAL NOT NECESSARY.

Ohio Woman's Experience.

Utica, Ohio.—"I had painful times for a number of years and for the past three years was so bad that I was a misery to me. The doctors told me I would have to go to a hospital before I would ever be better. A year ago this winter and spring I was worse than before. I was so bad for five months that I knew something must be done, so I wrote to Dr. Pierce telling him as nearly as I could how I suffered. He outlined a course of treatment which I followed to the letter. I took two bottles of 'Favorite Prescription,' one of 'Golden Medical Discovery' and a fifty-cent bottle of 'Smart-weed' and have never suffered much since. I wish I could tell every suffering woman the world over what a boon Dr. Pierce's medicines are. There is no use wasting time and money doctoring with anything or anyone else."—Mrs. B. F. DICKOVER, Route 4, Utica, Ohio.

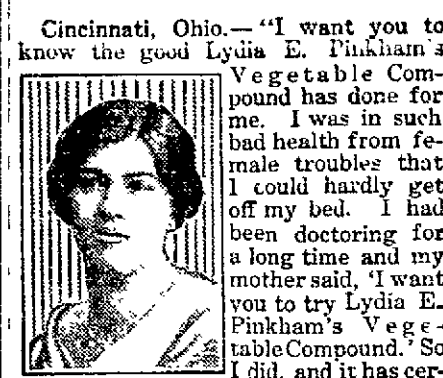

An affection confined to women must have its cause in the womanly nature. There is no doubt that a diseased condition of the delicate womanly organs, is in general responsible for feminine nervousness and an undermined constitution.

The use of Dr. Pierce's Favorite Prescription makes women happy by making them healthy. There are no more crying spells. "Favorite Prescription" cures inflammation and female weakness. It makes weak women strong, sick women well.

Get the "Prescription" today—either in liquid or tablet form—if you want to better your physical condition speedily. Dr. Pierce's Pellets regulate stomach, liver and bowels.

MOTHER SAID TRY IT

Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound Cured Mrs. Copner after Doctor's Failed.

Cincinnati, Ohio.—"I want you to know the good Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I was in such bad health from female troubles that I could hardly get off my bed. I had been doctoring for a long time and my mother said, 'I want you to try Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.' So I did, and it has certainly made me a well woman. I am able to do my house work and am so happy as I never expected to go around the way I do again, and I want others to know what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me."—Mrs. JOSIE COPNER, 1668 Harrison Ave., Fairmount, Cincinnati, Ohio.

No woman suffering from any form of female troubles should lose hope until she has given Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a fair trial.

This famous remedy, the medicinal ingredients of which are derived from choice roots and herbs, has for forty years proved to be a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

Wiltberger, 1831 North Fourth street, in the presence of 50 guests. During the ceremony the bride party stood in the living room where palms, lilies and tall candles formed a background. The bride's table was decked with sweet peas and centered with a brass candelabrum.

Mary Elizabeth Wiltberger and Roland Benjamin Wiltberger, Jr., the children of Dr. and Mrs. Roland Benjamin Wiltberger, led the bridal procession. They were dressed in white and carried baskets filled with rose petals. Mrs. Allen Percy Bissell of Steubenville, the bride's sister, was matron of honor. She wore a gown of flowered net over yellow silk and carried Aaron Ward roses.

The bride, who was given in marriage by her brother, Dr. Wiltberger, wore white crepe de chine and carried an ivory prayerbook showered with sweet peas and lilies of the valley. Her Chantilly lace veil was the same one worn five years ago by her sister, Mrs. Bissell.

Mrs. Wiltberger, mother of the bride, wore white tulle trimmed with rose point lace. The gown worn by Mrs. Black, mother of the bridegroom, was fashioned of dark blue georgette crepe over black satin.

Mr. William Beach was Mr. Black's best man. The bride cut the wedding cake with a knife which has been in

Break A Child's Cold By Giving Syrup Of Figs

When your child suffers from a cold don't wait; give the little stomach, liver and bowels a gentle, thorough cleansing at once. When cross, peevish, listless, pale, doesn't sleep, eat or act naturally; if breath is bad, stomach sour, give a teaspoonful of "California Syrup of Figs," and in a few hours all the clogged-up, constipated waste, sour bile and undigested food will gently move out of the bowels, and you have a well, playful child again.

If your child coughs, snuffles and has a sore throat give a good dose of "California Syrup of Figs" to evacuate the bowels no difference what other treatment is given.

Sick children needn't be coaxed to take this harmless "fruit laxative." Millions of mothers keep it handy because they know its action on the stomach, liver and bowels is prompt and sure. They also know a little given today saves a sick child tomorrow.

Ask your druggist for a 50-cent bottle of "California Syrup of Figs," which contains directions for babies, children of all ages and for grown-ups plainly on the bottle. Beware of counterfeiters sold here. Get the genuine, made by "California Fig Syrup Company."

How You Can Have Beautiful Hair

None Should Be Bald

Fresh air and sunshine, cleanliness and wise care of the hair mean hair abundance and hair beauty. They must come together.

If you are troubled with dandruff begin its cure at once. If your hair has started to fall out, if it is dry and dull and lifeless, restore its health before too late.

Men should not be bald. No dandruff should ever litter a man's coat collar.

Every woman should have long, glossy, wavy, beautiful hair.

Nature will help you. But you must do your part. Assist Nature with Q-Ban and cleanliness. Do it in time.

Woman's Hair Long, Lustrous, Charming

Care for your hair as you do your teeth. Remember that. It's the secret of hair beauty.

First—a thorough washing. Use a good soap or shampoo. For instance, Q-Ban Liquid Shampoo. A bottle costs but 50c and lasts a long time. It contains nothing harmful. Its fragrance is a delicate charm. It makes a wonderful lather.

Then apply Q-Ban Hair Tonic. This comes in 50c and $1.00 bottles. Wet your hair with it freely. Rub it into the scalp.

When your head is dry, get out into the air. Sunshine and air are free. Combined with Q-Ban they will work marvels for your hair.

Apply Q-Ban Tonic daily. You'll need but a little at a time. The way your hair will grow will delight you. The absence of dandruff will be a pleasure. Your hair's softness and lustre will be a joy.

It is all so easy—so inexpensive. And so certain of results.

None Need Be Gray

Of course, to dye the hair is not in good taste. It is not even safe. But Q-Ban Hair Color Restorer is NOT a dye. And it will bring back the natural color of your hair just as surely as the sun rises and sets.

Why then, should you have gray or faded hair?

Q-Ban Hair Color Restorer is used by men and women of the highest standing. It is the discovery of a great chemist—an easy, natural, tasteful way to restore gray or faded hair without dangerous, dirty, sticky dyes and paints. It is guaranteed to be harmless. It is the only guaranteed hair color restorer. Money back if not satisfied. Its popularity has grown in amazing strides all over the United States.

This good hair restorer is made from a scientific formula of glycerin, sweet, alcohol, ethyle and delicate perfume. It is endorsed by Prof. Von Huber. It is the only preparation for the purpose sold in the many stores of the Louis K. Liggett Company throughout New York and New England.

Q-Ban does not pretend to be instantaneous. Such claims belong to dyes and the like. Its result is gradual and healthful. It follows Nature's course. Its work is permanent.

Apply Q-Ban Restorer freely. Wet your hair all over. Then expose your hair to the sun and air. They are free, remember. Gradually, evenly, delightfully, your hair will resume its original dark shade. Grayness will disappear. Glossy, lustrous, soft and fluffy—these your hair will become. Men will be pleased with their added look of vitality and virility. Women with their added fascination. It will seem like magic. The simpler things often do.

The secret really rests in oxidation (from oxygen in the air). This comes from the actual exposure of your hair to sunshine and air after Q-Ban Restorer has been applied. These are Nature's medicines. Combined with Q-Ban they work wonders. Remember,

Sunshine and Air Restore Gray Hair

THE STEEL TRUST AND THE GOVERNMENT

A mild tempest was stirred up the other day in the national teapot when Secretary Daniels let a contract for big shells for the navy to an English firm because no member of the steel trust in this country would make them for the department at a reasonable price. Now the British government has unwittingly come to the rescue of the steel trust by refusing to allow any English munition makers to bid on outside work until after the end of the war.

This will undoubtedly cause wild rejoicing among the trust magnates and will result in the sky cutting of sundry millions later on at the expense of the American public. With foreign competition cut off the navy and army will furnish fat picking for the munition patriots, the gentlemen who are so concerned about the safety of the United States that they would have compulsory military training and conscription introduced at once.

The nation's ship yards are soon to be enlarged. The government is now planning a national armor plate factory. The insolent attitude of the steel trust makes a national projectile factory imperative, if we are to engage in the war game as extensively as the munition making patriots would have us. But it may be that when the government enters on the latter project the patriotic ardor of the heads of the steel trust will cool to the point where we shall hear less from them on the subject of militarism.

Taking these gentlemen at their word and assuming that our national peril is as great as they say it is, then we believe the day has come when the government would be amply justified in confiscating one of the plants of the steel trust—several of them if necessary—and without more ado make such munitions as the war and navy departments deem necessary.

Some of our friends who own stock in these concerns will doubtless hold up their hands in holy horror at this suggestion and cry anarchy and socialism—and if it will make them feel better to do so we hope they will pop off with that kind of stuff to their hearts' content—for it will do them good and no one else any harm. But the great mass of men will applaud the sentiment.

For this steel trust is, after all, the creature of the government. Fifty years ago it began its shameless campaign for governmental bounty and privilege. "Thru special tariff legislation this aggregation of capital," which is now apparently more powerful than the government, has held virtual control of the federal taxing power for a full half century. Special Privilege has made it just what it is. For the people to take it over would merely be taking back the principal with no interest.

Whenever you hear Messrs. Schwab and Gary and other steel magnates denouncing the common run of Americans for their lack of patriotism, just remember the quality of patriotism they are now displaying in their dealings with the government—and restrain yourself when you feel like prodding a few of these eminent fourthflushers with one of the nice new steel bayonets that they are selling to you at 200 percent profit.

It is really interesting to watch Columbus Roosevelt and Perkins fight the Old Guard tooth and toe and for three years following a presidential campaign and then before the fourth year is well along to see them eating out of Murray Crane's and Boss Barnes's hands.

This eminent gentleman from the Orient, Mr. Tagore, dwells constantly on the fact that our American women have nothing to do. It is well for Mr. Tagore that they haven't, else he would address empty chairs most of the time.

It's a good thing that all this talk about a lead in congress occurs before the day Mrs. Jeanette Rankin takes her seat, else someone might instigate something and then there'd be something doing.

As it has been proved easy possible to spend one billion dollars at a short session of congress, the last argument in favor of a long session seems to be dispensed with.

Two current Presidential candidates are scheduled to fight a duel next week. Yesterday why not have them flip a coin to see which one of them goes to the front?

ALL CARS GOOD
By Walt Mason

The modern motor car is fine. In working out its smooth design, the four inventors in the land have nearly spavined brain and hand. Pale science sat up day and night, to make your motor a delight. The chameleon vision of this time is out of sight, superbly subtle, and it will stand for any test all cars are good but mine's the best. All cars are good the poorest boat, that tries to get its own way out, is better far than anything we knew ten years ago, by far. The monarch of the last decade, when he went forth, on dress parade, could not command a rig as great as your old "four," or "six," or "eight." Invention rose, at man's behest and made great cars—and mine's the best. No more we wait for sidetracked trains, but scot at will across the plains. All roads are ours, all pleasant views, the prairies wet with morning dew, the hillside and the woodland green, while we can pay for gasoline. We travel when we wish to go, and travel fast or travel slow, and when we're tired we stop to rest. All cars are good, but mine's the best.

Of Suffrage To Women

Reynolds Bill Goes On House Calendar And May Reach Vote This Week—Deadlock On First Vote Is Broken By Representative Shinn.

COLUMBIA, JAN. 30.—After a meeting bill of amendment, the house committee on privileges and elections Tuesday by a vote of six to three, recommended for passage the Reynolds bill, giving presidential suffrage to Ohio women.

The committee first deadlocked on the question of recommending passage, with five votes for and five against, and this forced Rep. Reynolds, author of the measure, to agree that the bill should go before the house without any recommendation of any kind.

Shinn To The Rescue
Rep. Shinn of Williamsport, Pa., who held the balance of power, was absent when the deadlocking vote was taken. When he heard the committee was in session, he rushed into the meeting and announced he was for recommending passage.

"I don't want to be placed in the position of after-coming to help a thing on this important question," Shinn declared.

Wins On Reconsideration
A motion by Reynolds that there be a reconsideration carried and then his motion that the presidential suffrage bill go before the house with the committee's endorsement at hand it got seven votes. Baum of Summit, who was one of the five members who originally had voted against a recommendation for passage, changed his vote to the other side.

How They Voted
The seven who voted the bill out with recommendation for passage were: Shinn of Williamsport, Branch of Lucas, Stewart of Guernsey, Reynolds of Cuyahoga, Baum of Summit, Democrats, and Klous of Madison, and

Nuxated Iron To Make New Age Of Beautiful Women and Vigorous Iron Men

Say Physicians—Quickly Puts Roses Into the Cheeks of Women and Most Astonishing Youthful Power Into The Veins of Men—It Often Increases the Strength and Endurance of Delicate, Nervous "Run-Down" Folks 200 Per Cent. in Two Weeks' Time

A Wonderful Discovery Which Promises to Mark a New Era in Medical Science

NEW YORK, N. Y.—Since the remarkable discovery of organic iron, Nuxated Iron or "Per Nuxate" as the French call it, has taken the country by storm. It is conservatively estimated that over three million people annually are taking it in this country alone. Most astonishing results are reported from its use by both physicians and laymen. So much so that doctors predict that we shall soon have a new age of far more beautiful, rosy cheeked women and vigorous iron men.

Dr. King, a New York physician and author, when interviewed on the subject, said: "There can be no vigorous iron men without iron. Pallor, anæmia, anæmia, anæmia, anæmia, iron deficiency. The skin of anæmic men and women is pale; the flesh flabby. The muscles lack tone; the brain weak and the memory fails and often they become weak, nervous, irritable, despondent and melancholy. When the iron goes from the blood of women, the roses go from their cheeks."

"In the most common foods of America, the starches, sugars, table syrups, candies, polished rice, white bread, soda crackers, biscuits, macaroni, spaghetti, tapioca, sago, farina, dehydrated cornmeal, no longer is iron to be found. Refining processes, have removed the iron of Mother Earth from these impoverished foods, and silly methods of home cookery, by throwing down the waste pipe the water in which our vegetables are cooked, are responsible for another grave iron loss."

"Therefore, if you wish to preserve your youthful vim and vigor to a ripe old age, you must supply the iron deficiency in your food by using some form of organic iron, just as you should use salt when your food has not enough salt."

Dr. Sauer, who has studied abroad in great European medical institutions, said: "As I have said a hundred times, over organic iron is the greatest of all strength builders. If people would only throw away patent medicines and nauseous concoctions and take nuxated iron, I am convinced that the lives of thousands of persons might be saved who now die every year from pneumonia, grippe, consumption, kidney, liver, heart trouble, etc. The real and true cause which started their disease was nothing more nor less than a weakened condition brought on by lack of iron in the blood."

"Not long ago a man came to me, who was nearly half a century old and asked me to give him a preliminary examination for life insurance. I was astonished to find him with the blood pressure of a boy of twenty and as full of vigor, vim and vitality as a young man, in fact, a young man he really was, notwithstanding his age. The secret, he said, was taking Nuxated Iron. He had filled him with renewed life. At 30 he was in bad health; at 40 he was careworn and nearly all in. Now at 50 after taking Nuxated Iron, a miracle of vitality and life force beaming with the buoyancy of youth. Iron is absolutely necessary to enable your blood to change food into living tissue. Without it, no matter how much or what you eat, your food merely passes thru you without doing you any good. You don't get the strength out of it, and as a consequence you become weak, pale and sickly looking, just like a plant trying to grow in a soil deficient in iron. If you are not strong or well, you owe it to yourself to make the following test: See how long you can work or how far you can walk without becoming tired. Next take two five-grain tablets of ordinary nuxated iron three times per day after meals for two weeks. Then test your strength again and see how much you have gained. I have seen dozens of nervous, run-down people who were ailing all the while doubling their strength and endurance and entirely rid themselves of all symptoms of dyspepsia, liver and other troubles in from ten to fourteen days' time, simply by taking iron in the proper form. And this, after they had in some cases been doctoring for months without obtaining any benefit. But don't take the old forms of reduced iron, iron acetate, or tincture of iron, simply to save a few cents. The iron demanded by Mother Nature for the red coloring matter in the blood of her children is, alas! not that kind of iron. You must take iron in a form that can be easily absorbed and assimilated to do you any good, otherwise it may prove worse than useless. Many an athlete and prize-fighter has won the day simply because he knew the secret of great strength and endurance and filled his blood with iron before he went into the arena, while many another has gone down in glorious defeat simply for the lack of iron."

Dr. Schuyler C. Jaques, Visiting Surgeon of St. Elizabeth's Hospital of New York City, said: "I have never before given out any medical information or advice for publication, as I ordinarily do not believe in it. But in the case of Nuxated Iron I feel I would be 'cans in my duty not to mention it. I have taken it myself and given it to my patients with most surprising and satisfactory results. And those who wish quickly to increase their strength, power and endurance will find it a most remarkable and wonderfully effective remedy."

NOTE—Nuxated Iron, which is prescribed and recommended above by physicians in such a great variety of cases, is not a patent medicine nor secret remedy, but one which is well known to druggists and whose iron constituents are widely prescribed by eminent physicians both in Europe and America. Unlike the older inorganic iron products it is easily assimilated, does not injure the teeth, make them black, nor upset the stomach, on the contrary, it is a most potent remedy in nearly all forms of indigestion as well as for nervous, run-down conditions. The manufacturers have such great confidence in nuxated iron, that they offer to forfeit $100.00 to any charitable institution if they cannot take any man or woman under 60 who lacks iron, and increase their strength 200 per cent or over in four weeks' time, provided they have no serious organic trouble. They also offer to refund your money if it does not at least double your strength and endurance in ten days' time. It is dispensed in this city by Page and Lorenz, Siegrist & Williams, and all good druggists.

Teamwork on a Battleship.
The problem of naval expansion would not be so hard were it not for the fact that every ship needs such a great number in its crew, because the greater the number of men that must work together as "a team" the greater the difficulty of accomplishing the "teamwork" and the longer the time required. In a ship, especially in a large ship like a battleship or battle cruiser, most of the men work together in large groups, such as turret crews, 100 men sometimes composing a turret crew. Nevertheless the ship and all the men it floats are bound together by invisible cords that make a ship a unit, and the major effect of the training and of the drills of all kinds is to make the whole a living organism.—Rear Admiral Bradley A. Fiske in World's Work.

Waterloo.
Sir Walter Scott once said that the loss of the battle of Waterloo threw half Britain into mourning, yet the casualties of England and her allies were only 22,428, which included the wounded and missing. The French are supposed to have lost 31,000 or 32,000, as many of the exhausted men were trampled on by the troops of Blucher, but owing to Napoleon's exile to St. Helena no accurate record could be made.

History of Oils.

For twenty centuries the oil lamp with very little variation in general design, served the purpose of lighting interiors, from the hovel of the peasant to the palace of the king, from the cave-hidden chapel of the early Christians to the statestest religious temples of medieval and modern days. Up to the middle of the nineteenth century only oils of a vegetable and animal origin were employed. Then in 1850 James Young of Scotland introduced the mineral oils, kerosene and paraffin.

REIGNS OF TERROR

Times During Which Law and Order Are Dethroned.

WHEN CITIES GO STARK MAD.

This Has Happened Many Times in Different Lands, the Most Notable Example Being Frenzied Paris in the Revolution and in the Commune.

During the insurrection in Ireland, which had its center in the historic old capital of that long troubled isle and which resulted in the execution of several of its leaders, including Sir Roger Casement, Dublin went stark mad, raving mad. It is a way cities have sometimes. Then, just as single individuals do when smitten with insanity, they perpetrate all sorts of horrible deeds that in their saner moments they would be the first to repudiate and condemn.

Paris was attacked by just such a violent fit of mental aberration during the stormy and blood soaked days of the revolution and again immediately after the last Franco-German war. Her revolutionists in the latter event called themselves "Communists," and these frenzied people did pretty much as did the Dublin insurrectionists—that is to say, they seized public buildings, threw up street barricades and entrenched themselves in open strategic spaces. The result in the end, too, was the same. They were overpowered by the regular troops, and the bulk of them were killed or made prisoners, but not until a fourth part of Paris had been laid in ruins, property worth $32,000,000 being destroyed.

To find anything in London approximating to the Dublin madness we must go back to the year 1780, when Lord George Gordon's armed rioters held England's capital at their mercy for several days. On this occasion Newgate jail was stormed and set on fire, after the prisoners had been released, the Bank of England was besieged and hundreds of houses, churches, shops and other buildings were set on fire and destroyed. Bristol's turn came fifty years later, during the reform agitation of 1831. The city, long seething with political excitement, suddenly exploded like a powder magazine to which a lighted match is applied, and in the course of a day and night 500 of her citizens were killed by the military or burnt to death in the fires they themselves had kindled, and most of her principal buildings, including the mansion house, the bishop's palace and above 100 shops and private dwellings, were heaps of blackened ruins.

In 1830, Newport, Monmouthshire, underwent a similar experience, but the mayor called out the troops with commendable promptitude, and after a brief but bloody conflict in the market square the "maddened" rioters fled, leaving the place "a shambles." Of what a fiery Welsh mob is capable, however, when it is allowed to get out of hand, was shown in 1882 at Tredegar, in the same county, when the miners there, infuriated by an attack made on a Protestant religious meeting by some Irish Roman Catholics, stormed the quarter of the town in which the latter lived, and literally wiped it off the face of the earth.

In 1913 five white mechanics working underground at the New Kleinfontein mine, near Johannesburg, were asked to assent to an alteration of hours that would involve their working for the future on Saturday afternoons. They refused and were dismissed, whereupon practically all the white miners on the Rand came out on strike.

That week saw Johannesburg given up to scenes similar to those enacted in Dublin. Bands of armed men fought the soldiers with rifles, with revolvers, with dynamite bombs. The railway station was set on fire and destroyed. The offices of the Star newspaper were blown to pieces with giant powder. To venture into the streets was to gamble with death. In the end, of course, the military got the upper hand—they always do—but not until some 200 of the strikers and their sympathizers had been killed and wounded. Hunger sometimes drives cities crazy. The people suffer until they feel they can suffer no longer. Then the madness mounts into their brains, and things—terrible things—happen. Milan, for instance, went mad from this cause in 1893 owing to the long continued scarcity and dearth of bread. Gaunt, skeleton like women, stripped to the waist, led the rioters and urged them by fanatic cries and gestures to try conclusions with the soldiers.

Milan ran red with blood. In one short afternoon eighty-two of the hunger maddened people were shot dead. Many hundreds were wounded. Not a baker's shop in the city escaped being looted, and most of them were utterly destroyed into the bargain. But in the end the people got their way. The price of bread was reduced.

Belfast has periodical crazy fits. One of the worst occurred in 1886, when eleven people were killed outright and more than 200 were wounded.

New York city, too, had a flash of this kind during the draft riots of July 13 to 16, 1863.—London Tit-Bits.

An Eventful Episode

By EDWARD T. STEWART

I came home from business and sat down in my room for a brief rest before dressing for dinner and fell into a doze. I opened my eyes upon a young lady who lived next door looking down upon me in wonderment. I had often seen her going out and coming into her house and had admired her. She had long known me by sight, and nothing but the absence of an introduction had kept us from an acquaintance. But what was she doing in my room? From me she looked about her wildly and, having evidently become convinced that she had got into the wrong house, was about to take to flight when, hearing the front door open and shut, she stopped short.

"What shall I do?" she cried. I took in the situation at once. Her house and mine were exactly alike. She had come into mine thinking that she was in her own. On me depended the question as to whether or not she should escape the consequences of being caught not only in a man's house, but in his room. My mother had gone out, and I had been told on my return that she was expected home any minute. When I returned in the evening she invariably came at once to my room for a brief chat. My mother was an impulsive person, and I knew that if she had come in and found a young lady in my room she would be a very hard person to manage.

Within half a minute of the closing of the front door my mother stood on the threshold of my room, looking at the young lady and me standing like two guilty creatures before her. The girl cast an appealing look at me. "M-m-mother," I stammered, "this young lady has made a terrible mistake."

"I should say so," snapped my mother. "What use to stick to the truth—at any rate, for the moment? I must find some way of legitimizing the girl's presence in my room and confess the truth later, when I could get my mother alone and convince her that there was no criminality in it."

"Mother," I said, "let me introduce my wife."

"Your wife?"
"Yes, mother. I have kept this from you, expecting soon to put through a deal which would enable me to acknowledge my dear Susie as my wife. It was absolutely necessary that she should see me for a few minutes about a very important matter, and she ran in for the purpose. Your coming upon us thus suddenly has simply resulted in your obtaining a trifle earlier than you would have otherwise received it. Mother, congratulate me."

I went to her, put my arms about her, and she suffered me to kiss her.

"Do you mean to tell me," she said, "that you are really married?"

There was no escape for the moment. Leaving mother, I went to the young lady, put an arm about her and said, "Yes, I am married to the dearest girl on earth, one you will be proud, when you know her, to call your daughter."

"And you have married my son?" asked mother of the girl.

My supposed bride, doubtless to escape the gaze of one to whom she was constrained to tell a lie, hid her face on my breast, but made no reply.

"Oh, Arthur," said my mother to me in a pained voice, "it was bad enough to introduce this person into your mother's house without—"

"Yes," cried the poor girl.

My mother stood looking from one of us to the other without speaking. Backing against my room and not twenty feet from it was an apartment house facing on another street. My window and one directly facing mine in this house were both open, and an elderly woman was looking in upon this episode with an expression of intense interest. My mother caught sight of her, and whatever of discretion there was in her came to the surface. She gave me a hasty kiss, then went to my supposed bride and repeated the performance.

"Better go downstairs to the library," she said. And while we obeyed her command she went to the window and drew down the shade.

"Oh, heavens!" cried the girl when we were alone. "We are undone. That horrid woman in the other house saw and heard the whole thing."

"You're right," I replied.

"Now we have another to explain to."

"An explanation will do no good. I could have explained to my mother, but this other person hearing me acknowledge you as my wife and you acknowledge me as your husband makes a great difference."

"What difference?"

"We are legally married."

The girl covered her face with her hands. I went to her and, putting an arm about her, removed her hands.

"Marriage is a lottery," I said. "How do we know but that this mistake of yours may bring us great happiness? I propose that we let fate work it out for us. For the present let us do nothing. Your good name, at least, is safe. What we may do hereafter let us decide hereafter. Meantime we have been promoted to an acquaintance and an engagement at the same time. A real simon pure marriage may follow if we both come to desire it."

She was quieted with this and went home. A brief courtship followed. Before we were married I told my mother the truth, and she believed me.

THE PLAINS GREATEST HUNT

BY BUFFALO BILL
FROM TRUE TALES OF THE PLAINS

unique beyond compare up to date and one well high impossible in the future to duplicate. I had located an immense herd of buffaloes, and all arrangements were complete. The blanket was waved three times, and off the outfit started at daylight. The Indians were painted in a variety of colors, had discarded all their artistic adornments, different colored ornaments, jewelry, feathers and other apparel and looked like real children of nature, almost in Adam's costume; only a breechcloth around their loins, moccasins on their feet, no saddle, no bridle, the ponies, with only a thin rubber harness between their teeth, some with only light bow and arrows, others with their rifle, revolver, ammunition, no unnecessary weight, so that they could ride like lightning. They even spared their horses and walked most of the time, but with such speed that it kept every one "hopping" to go the pace. This took kept up until the herd was in sight.

A council was held, and the council was passed around, and everything was ready, while every Indian mounted his horse, which seemed more excited than his rider. About 200 were in the front line, 150 in the second line and 100 composed the rear. The chiefs were in the front, snapping their whips in the air and holding the riders together, with the ponies bounding, prancing and stamping their feet, impatient as their masters, each seeming to form one soul and one body, centaurs, all waiting for the signal, all with one feeling, one desire, to gain as many hunrels as possible when the chief suddenly gave the signal to go. Thunder and lightning! What a tornado! What a storm of horsemen as, with impetuosity, these nomads dashed on their prey. With the roar of Niagara, the speed of a cyclone, the swiftness of an avalanche, these strange figures threw themselves in a mad, wild rush on their fleeing victims, and soon in the midst of the dust cloud one could only see an indistinguishable maelstrom of flying arrows, accompanied with rifle shots, galloping horses, falling buffaloes and dead riding Indians on their wild ponies. It was a confusion in one sense and regulated action in another, forming almost a delirium of delight to the hunters. Some went flying from one end of the prairie to the other after stragglers, while the main guard formed in such a manner as to make the buffaloes circle. The signal to halt was given, and as the dust cloud rose little by little like a curtain in the theater the horses were seen at a standstill, and the prairie was strewn with the buffaloes that fell. Calm and practical fellows were these Indians. Even the horses began quietly pasturing on the grasses, while the hunters proceeded to pull off the hides and cut out the tongues and favorite pieces of their native cattle and preparing the meat in strips for preservation.

During the progress of the hunt the grand duke expressed a desire to have a test made as to the use of the bow and arrow made by the Indians. "Two Lance," with a reputation as a buffalo hunting chief, was selected for the purpose. While riding at full speed he shot an arrow from his bow which pierced a buffalo clean through from side to side. The grand duke considered the feat so remarkable that he took the arrow home with him as a memento of the occasion.

The commissary wagons assisted in bringing fresh meat to camp, and great festivities marked the closing of this grand hunt. Guests and hosts had tasted of one of the most glorious feasts that ever true Nomads attended. Sheridan was delighted, everybody was congratulated, and the picture still lingers in my mind with young General Custer predominating the grand assemblage. He was the life and spirit, one might say, of the occasion, and to me it is sad to think of another picture that depends almost alone on imagination and of which "more anon"—that of Custer's last battle.

The fault which hinders us is of more use than a good action which puffs us up with pride.—Boree.

Deposed President Of Costa Rica Asks U. S. To Get His Job Back

Gonzales, A Refugee, Sends Appeal To Washington For Intervention —South American Republic Now Quiet—Minister of War Becomes Executive In Revolution Without Bloodshed.

WASHINGTON, JAN. 30.—Alfredo Gonzalez, deposed president of Costa Rica, has sent an appeal to the United States government for intervention. He is a refugee now in the American legation at San Jose, where his former minister of war, Federico Tinoco, has installed himself as provisional president after a revolution that was brought to a triumphant conclusion twelve hours after it was begun, with out bloodshed.

Word that the ex-president has submitted his appeal to the American minister was received here in a private message, and late tonight the state department had not been advised officially of the development.

Official and unofficial reports of the overthrow of the Gonzalez administration, while throwing virtually no light on the causes, afford little ground for the belief that the United States will interfere.

The revolutionists killed no one, and, according to reports received by representatives of interests in that country, the development was the culmination of a popular demand.

President Gonzalez and Manuel Castro Quesada, Costa Rican minister to Washington, who was home on leave of absence, were granted asylum in the American legation without question when they appeared for protection a short time after General Tinoco proclaimed to the populace that the president had been deposed and that he had made himself the provisional executive.

The delay of Minister Hale in reporting the incident to the state department was occasioned by refusal of the new authorities to permit him to use the cable for the transmission of his dispatches until complete order had been established.

General Tinoco's control of the army and his personal standing with other men high in the government affairs apparently enabled him to accomplish the overthrow of President Gonzalez without opposition. For a short time railroads out of San Jose were not permitted to operate, but before Sunday night they were running as usual.

Costa Rica thru the legation here has been appealing to the United States to induce Nicaragua to abide by the decision of the Central American court of justice, which decided that Nicaragua was at fault in having entered into treaty without the consent of Costa Rica.

RETURNS TO HOME CITY

Clyde Moore, son of Mr. and Mrs. Charles Moore, has returned to Cohocton after an absence of twenty years. Moore is an ex-sailor and fought with Admiral Dewey at Manila Bay.

Moore is engaged in business at Norfolk, Va. He returned to this city in connection with the probate of the will of J. C. Adams. Moore was willed part of the estate.

Epitaph of a Cynic.
John Goodwin of Sutton, Surrey county, England, was a cynic. His own will converts him of so being. He directed in this document that no women be allowed in his funeral cortege. And on his tombstone he bade that the following verse be carved:
Farewell, vain earth, I've had enough of thee.
And now am careless what thou say'st of me.
Thy smiles I can't not, nor thy frowns I fear.
My care is past, my head lies quiet here.
What faults you see in me take care to shun
And look at home, enough is to be done.

Never Out of Date.

We are inclined to smile at the quaint costumes that our grandfathers wore, and at their rather stilted, formal manners. We dispense with great many things which were considered important a hundred years ago. But patient, maddening perseverance sticking to a thing till you finish it, held in as high esteem in the twentieth century as it was in the eighteenth. In industry and patience are never out of date.

Optimistic Thought.
A handful of common sense is worth a bushel of learning.

TAUGHT BY A WORM.

This Lowly Creature Suggested the First Submarine Tunnel.

The first great under water tunnel was built beneath the Thames at London by Sir Mark Isambard Brunel. Brunel was one of the most prolific inventors of his time, and he was a pioneer in many lines, but the Thames tunnel is his greatest memorial.

It was a worm which suggested to Brunel the possibility of a tunnel under the Thames. While passing through a dockyard he noticed a piece of ship timber perforated by a destructive worm—the Terebra Navalis. Brunel studied the worm's mode of operation in boring into the wood, and this suggested to his mind the construction of a cast iron shield which should bore like an auger by means of strong hydraulic screws, and as rapidly as the earth was cut away bricklayers should be at hand to replace it with an arch.

The work on the Thames tunnel commenced in 1825, and after many vicissitudes and accidents it was completed in 1843, when Brunel was knighted by Queen Victoria. Brunel was also the first to make shoes by machinery, and he devised machines for knitting, nail-making, ruling paper and making wooden boxes. In his youth Brunel spent several years in America, designed and built a theater in New York and planned fortifications for the city.—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

SHUTTING UP THE SHOP.

No Brightly Lighted Show Windows at Night In South America.

It is rather surprising to the foreigner visiting South American countries for the first time to find most of the best and prettiest shops almost hermetically sealed at night. If the building is of the older style of construction the heavy shutters are closed and locked by iron bars; if a more modern building the flexible sliding doors and windows are completely drawn, and the passer-by can see nothing within the shop.

All is darkness save the light of the street lamps. No brilliantly lighted windows help to add cheer and brightness to the street.

In European and American cities the average merchant is willing to spend money freely for nightly display of his wares and merchandise. He realizes and appreciates the publicity. The evening crowds upon our streets are highly entertained and even instructed by window displays of the busy streets.

Herein lies the difference, for, as a rule, the South American streets, busy and attractive during the day, are quite the reverse at night. Even in some of the larger cities the old custom of hermetically sealing the shop at night prevails.—Baltimore American.

Suspended Animation.

As we descend in the scale of animal life, we find that what kills the higher animals does not injure the lower. Cut a polyp in two and you have two living polyps instead of one dead polyp. Break off a lobster's claw and another will grow. You may, it has been said, freeze a fly, but you cannot freeze it to death. There are infusoria called "wheel animalcules." These rotifers have many curious qualities, among which is that of suspending animation for an indefinite period without ceasing to live. Colonies of rotifers may be desiccated and rendered apparently lifeless, and in this condition they may be kept for months and years and possibly centuries. A single drop of water will restore them to life, and the wheel bearers will instantly resume their functional activity precisely at the point where it was broken off.

Hopeless Inquiry.

A stranger was questioning Helen, trying to get her to say her father's first name.
"What does your mother call you papa?"
"She calls him my daddy."
"Yes, but when she wants to speak to him what does she say?"
"She says, 'Gee, please,'" was Helen's reply.
"I don't mean when she calls him at the office. When she tells him to get up in the morning what does she call him?"
"He says to be ready in about four minutes,"—Youth's Companion.

Sanskrit.

The Sanskrit is the language of the ancient Hindus. It is not now spoken and is understood only by the Brahmins and by scholars who have made a special study of it. It bears a striking likeness to the Greek, Latin, German, Celtic and Slavonic languages, and, though Sanskrit is not regarded as the parent of these dialects, it is looked upon as the language nearest to the original speech of the undivided Aryans.

OPEN NOSTRILS! END A COLD OR CATARRH

How To Get Relief When Head and Nose are Stuffed Up.

Count fifty! Your cold in head or catarrh disappears. Your clogged nostrils will open, the air passages of your head will clear and you can breathe freely. No more snuffling, hawing, mucous discharge, dryness or headache; no struggling for breath at night.

Get a small bottle of Ely's Cream Balm from your druggist and apply a little of this fragrant antiseptic cream in your nostrils. It penetrates thru every air passage of the head, soothing and healing the swollen or inflamed mucous membrane, giving you instant relief. Head colds and catarrh yield like magic. Don't stay stuffed up and miserable. Relief is sure.

Start Tomorrow and Keep It Up Every Morning

Get in the habit of drinking a glass of hot water before breakfast.

We're not here long, so let's make our stay agreeable. Let us live well, eat well, digest well, work well, sleep well, and look well. What a glorious condition to attain, and yet how very easy it is if one will only adopt the morning inside bath.

Folks who are accustomed to feel dull and heavy when they arise, splitting headache, stuffy from a cold, foul tongue, nasty breath, acid stomach, can, instead, feel as fresh as a daisy by opening the sluices of the system each morning an flushing out the whole of the internal poisonous stagnant matter.

Everyone, whether ailing, sick or well, should, each morning, before breakfast, drink a glass of real hot water with a teaspoonful of limestone phosphate in it to wash from the stomach, liver and bowels the previous day's indigestible waste, sour bile and poisonous toxins; thus cleansing, sweetening and purifying the entire alimentary canal before putting more food into the stomach. The action of hot water and limestone phosphate on an empty stomach is wonderfully invigorating. It cleans out all the sour fermentations, gases, waste and acidity and gives one a splendid appetite for breakfast. While you are enjoying your breakfast the water and phosphate is quietly extracting a large volume of water from the blood and getting ready for a thorough flushing of all the inside organs.

The millions of people who are bothered with constipation, bilious spells, stomach troubles; others who have sallow skins, blood disorders and sickly complexions are urged to get a quarter pound of limestone phosphate from the drug store. This will cost very little, but is sufficient to make anyone a pronounced crank on the subject of inside-bathing before breakfast.

Folly In Grieving.
One class of feelings can be extinguished only by the creation of another; one sentiment banished only by inviting the antagonism of another; one interest supplanted only by the stronger occupancy of another. So long as this is unperceived the overgrieving heart will seek in vain to discipline itself. Thinking of its sorrow as too much, instead of its sense of duty as too little, it fails to meet pointedly its own remedy.—James Martineau.

OLD-TIME COLD CURE—DRINK TEA!

Get a small package of Hainburg Breat-Tea, or as the German folks call it, "Hayburger Brust Thee," at any pharmacy. Take a tablespoonful of the tea, put a cup of boiling water upon it, pour thru a sieve and drink a teacup full at any time. It is the most effective way to break a cold and cure grip, as it opens the pores, relieving congestion. Also loosens the bowels, thus breaking a cold at once. It is inexpensive and entirely vegetable, therefore harmless.

There was a man in our town who would not advertise. He told that if he wore a barrel, he'd prove that he was wise. But when he got into the cask, with speed the swear words came. For it advertised upon its side, the manufacturer's name. MOST EVERYBODY NOW-A-DAYS ADVERTISES. DO YOU?

"Bill, this is the grand duke."

sidered a questionable war to secure a foreign guest from sedition or murder in the United States, but when it is known that the Indians are armed and outnumber the soldiers ten to one it will be admitted that Sheridan's "riddle me and I will tickle you" policy is the only safe one to pursue. From 1,500 to 2,000 Indians are expected.

The arrival in North Platte is thus described in dispatches of Jan. 3, 1872:

"The duke sighted from the train, the natives of the little station formed in line along the platform and, almost involuntarily, simultaneously removed their hats in honor of the distinguished visitor. Little Phil was master of ceremonies, and he was found that not a moment should be lost in starting for the camp, sixty miles distant. He arranged with 'Buffalo Bill' to be on hand and act as guide, and the renowned scout was promptly on time and in all his element. He was seated
